

Edited classics always prevail. We love the tried and true forms of the past used in a modern way, such as Lalique as a reinterpreted classic. Use their fabulous crystal candlesticks as a centerpiece on a dining room table—like 18 of them—and the repetitive forms make them incredibly now. High quality and luxe never go out of style. Not being trendy is the next big trend!

LISA JACKSON

STEPHEN MILLER SIEGEL

ALEX PAPACHRISTIDIS

AP Interiors

There is a continuation of the trend of juxtaposing classic traditionalism with carefully chosen modern elements—the traditional look reworked with a fresh hand. It's a look that integrates contemporary art or furniture into a grand traditional style. Another trend is that the ethnic look that we've seen in fashion is now being picked up in the fabrics and furniture of interior design. It creates an aura of grand bohème.

JACKSON AND SIEGEL/PATRICK McMILLAN. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. PAPACHRISTIDIS PORTRAIT: PHILIP ENNIS. PAPACHRISTIDIS INTERIOR: PIETEK ESTERSON